It is worth exploring some of the key aspects of the report by the KVNA newspaper regarding its report, and how it came to be published without any prior information or research.

An editor for KVNA, Saeed Abdo, wrote: "I know you guys didn't write that one. It was taken down. No one has any idea who did this. This is something that is not a rumor. I just wrote a story, and one article, and now the whole story is on the Internet, and I can not control what everyone reads. I wanted to make sure.. The newspaper, KATU, was widely accused in the Muslim world of propaganda and outright lies. Yet in February 2017, the website that made the story and published it was again taken down by a government agent.. The website that made the news, The Islamic State, in Syria has been reported by multiple news outlets, including numerous in France. Many Islamic groups including ISIS, Al Nusra, and Ahrar were also featured in articles by the paper. The KVNA published a video clip of the purported Islamic State meeting at a school in Anbar, Iraq, in which the group is thought to pose for a picture with school children.. In December 2016, a local newspaper published a story suggesting that a group of Muslim men were plotting a jihad against the United States. The article stated, "We've heard, through Islamic websites that have spread across the country, that the Islamic State and various elements of Al Qaeda are plotting to take over the country by forcing converts to convert to Islam and killing Jews and Christians—even as others in Muslim countries are trying to counter that strategy.".. Lynch warned that allowing the National Security Agency to keep its massive collection of domestic telephone records without a warrant would be "particularly worrisome" under an order issued Thursday by the Federal Communications Commission that allows the agency to share the content of millions of Americans' telephone calls with agents of an unspecified foreign nation.. ADVERTISEMENT The news comes one day after Attorney General Eric Holder Michael (Eric) Eric HolderHolder says intelligence community won't comment on surveillance tactics Election Countdown: Kavanaugh allegations put GOP in tough spot | Republicans start to pull plug on candidates | Dems get early start in Iowa | O'Rourke defends Cruz after protesters interrupt dinner | Why Biden is the Democrat GOP most fears Bredeesen says he won't back Schumer for Senate Dem leader Trump, GOP regain edge in Kavanaugh battle MORE announced that he would issue a temporary moratorium on new domestic spying programs.. While there was no evidence that ISIS or another faction had threatened France or other Western countries with attack, these stories were seized on and shared widely. In the case of those stories, however, the article's title changed from "United States Muslim Army To Attack France, Germany And Germany's Allies" to "Islamist Group to Take Over France.".. "I am deeply concerned that the agency has the ability to gather vast numbers of the communications of millions of U.S. citizens without a lawful basis, without even a showing of a reasonable connection to an investigation of the terrorist threats to the United States," Lynch wrote.. This happened amid rumors that the story had been removed by the Washington Post and other outlets because of what the website called "inflammatory material" about Muslims. The website quickly retracted its story, and that the story was still being circulated had not been explained. Then, a video of the fake story circulated on social media, spreading the information far enough to generate outrage at how serious the hoax looked.. s <http://bit.ly/1DhY9Kk> Full Movie
